

Indo Rama holds Quality Circle training at ITI

One of the dignitaries speaking during the 'Quality Circle' training programme at ITI, Nagpur. The training was organised for ITI teaching staff members.

- Indo Rama has adopted ITI for the upgradation of academic standards and teaching methods
- The training was focused on the concepts of Quality Circle, its philosophy, techniques, tools and how it would benefit if applied in technical training

■ Business Bureau

INDO Rama recently organised 'Quality Circle' training at ITI, Nagpur for ITI teaching staff members. The venue was taken under the chairmanship of Sharad Verma- Chief of Operations, Indo Rama.

Indo Rama has adopted ITI for the upgradation of academic standards and teaching methods. U C Deveshwar, Chairman, QCFI- Nagpur has taken the initiative and designed the programme.

Vimal Goel, Assistant Vice President (Instrumentation) Indo Rama, has inaugurated the two-day training programme. The training was focused on the concepts of Quality Circle, its philosophy, techniques, tools and how it would benefit if applied in technical training institutes, as such industrial specific training is essential in the institute.

Ashok Gadge, Council Member of Quality Circle Forum of India and an HRD consultant along with Ajay Vidyabhanu, Assistant Manager (HR) from Indo Rama conducted the programme.

The programme was highly appreciated by the participants. In all 37 ITI teaching staff attended the training.

A R Rangari, Vice Principal, ITI-Nagpur was also present and gave vote of thanks to the participants, guests and the organisers. Indo Rama and ITI jointly will organise more skill and work culture development programme, shortly.

Indo Rama will also focus on providing counselling for concerning nature of vocational courses, career prospects of ITI students.